I am a Piano/Theory teacher with over 20 years experience of working with children and adults. I studied the Piano to degree level at Trinity College of Music, London. In addition to Piano teaching, I created and ran music classes for pre-school and primary aged children for over 10 years and I am a qualified Music Therapist. I teach students from 6 years old to adult, who range from beginner to advanced. I successfully prepare students for the ABRSM practical and theory exams and I have 100% pass rate. I tutor instrumentalists and singers for the aural component of ABRSM exams (Grade 6-8) and I prepare students for the practical requirement for GCSE and A Level music. I approach each student as an individual who will learn in their own way and progress at their own speed. But the one element that all students have in common is the need for regular practice in order to progress. I support this by giving clear weekly goals. I am committed to giving a solid musical education and I introduce theory, sight-reading and listening skills early on in the learning process. Practice and commitment are at the heart of progress and all students will naturally find that with regular practice their progress and enjoyment of the instrument will be greatly enhanced. I teach in my own home and students come from Kennington, Brixton, Clapham and Streatham as well as within walking distance in Stockwell, Oval and Camberwell.
