A knowledgeable, attentive and enthusiastic teacher with 20 years of teaching experience, I am currently a staff member at a leading stage school in London. As well as being a teacher and performer, I have experience in teaching English and Music in primary and secondary schools across Asia and Australia. I have a master of music degree in piano performance and have appeared on BBC radio one as a guest piano teacher for presenter Reggie Yates. I encourage students to first and foremost to play music they enjoy, and I aim to make lessons fun and relaxed. I teach students of all levels and ages, and have put many students through ABRSM exams and national competitions with great results. I believe in giving students an all-over education in music, and that includes not only performance but listening to a wide variety of music and understanding the history and theory behind it. I am also a seasoned performer, and have performed in concert halls as a soloist, chamber musician, accompanist and concerto soloist and bring with me a wealth of performing knowledge to pass onto students. I teach from my home in Wandsworth near King George's park. Home visits will be considered if there are 2 or more students in a household. I look forward to sharing my love of music with you.
